Chapter 1 by Lucas Lovegood

I was out of my school, when suddenly the ground starts shaking heavily and some pieces of wall and roof fall hurting my teammates.

The only thing that I did was to run down the street to a safety place.

Chapter 2 by Aaron Hartmann

When we got to the end of the street we heard so stampeding noises. We all turn to face the end of the street and we see a huge horde of slow moving, rotten people. We ran the other way and made it to my parent's apartment building and we rushed inside.

We ran straight past the elevator and to the stairs. We didn't want to take any chances. When we got to my floor we barged in and locked the door. My mom asked if there was an earthquake and I said that it was way worse.

One of my friends piped up and said that they look like zombies from his video games. I realized that this is the start of a real life zombie apocalypse.

Chapter 3 by ...

I thanked God that we lived on the ... didn't know how to use an elevator.

"So, a zombie apocalypse thing," she said, clearly not knowing us.

"Just look out the window, Mom," I said casually, knowing that she would see the truth.

She glanced out the window.
